

FROM THE TATURA BULLETIN

Although the Business and Professional Women's (BPW) Tatura club folded several years ago there is still a strong bond between past members. This was evident when 25 ex members got together at the Junction Hotel in Toolamba for lunch at their 6 monthly catch up. Several women came from quite a distance to catch up with friends including some from Melbourne and Warragul which just goes to show how strong the bonds between the women remain. We sat down to an excellent meal and chatted well into the afternoon. It was interesting to catch up on what was going on in each other's lives, the good and the not so good. Thanks go to Carol Ryan who organises the regular get together. The next one will be in at the same venue in March/April 2018. Any ex members who have not been on Carol's mailing list should feel free to contact her.

The Junction Hotel in Toolamba is a great central location and we were looked after very well. The hotel is owned and managed by Rowan and Deb Block. Rowan has been breeding lambs for some time and wanted somewhere to showcase his produce and the menu at the hotel does just that. We dined on roast lamb, rack of lamb, shanks and lamb Korma – but don't worry, for those who aren't partial to lamb there are plenty of other options.

The Junction Hotel is open for lunch Thursday to Sunday and has a full menu available for dinner on Friday and Saturday nights. Wednesday is special parma night and Thursday night is showcasing many new lamb dishes. The Hotel also has available several smaller rooms for meetings or private dinners. These rooms seat between 8-15 people.
